

Dicentra eximia

Common name: Wild Bleeding Heart

Hardiness: Zones 3 - 9

Light: Shade to Part Sun

Soil: Average to Moist

Size: 12"–18 " tall x 12"–18" wide

Foliage: Medium green, deeply cut, fern-like foliage

Flowers: Heart shaped pink flowers

Bloom Time: Late spring through fall

Wildlife Value: Long season of nectar for native bees

Dicentra eximia, Lady Bird Johnson Wildflower Center

Dicentra eximia is one of our longest blooming native wildflowers in the Eastern United States. It is easy to grow, rarely damaged by deer, and will gently re-seed itself.